Critical Illness Insurance

Routine checkups and screenings are part of keeping your health and wellness on track. For most of us, we just check them off after they're done and forget about them. For others, they may uncover something unexpected like cancer. Either way, it can be hard to feel secure until we get our results back.

Thankfully, more women are surviving cancer than ever before. What may surprise you is the growing need for financial help after facing a serious illness. Rising healthcare costs and high-deductible healthcare plans are passing on more costs to people. Faced with hard times, raising money through websites like GoFundMe is becoming more and more common.

There's a better way. Critical illness insurance will pay money directly to you should you face a serious illness like cancer, heart attack¹ or Advanced Alzheimer's disease. The policy provides money you can use any way you wish, such as:

Deductibles and copays/coinsurance

Lost income from missed work

Everyday expenses – mortgage/rent, utilities, childcare

Experimental treatments and travel
